

ABSTRACT

A ceramic structure for forming a piezoelectric ceramic element for power generation and method formed by blending a mixture of ceramic particles and heat resistant fibers together with the heat resistant fibers possessing a sintering temperature and tensile strength higher than that possessed by the ceramic particles in the composite. The fibers added to the composite have a higher melting point than the sintering temperature of the ceramic powder particles resulting in improved crack resistance.